

Can you find the missing letters?

My friend Jatty and I decided to enter the school public speaking competition. The topic was, 'It is inexcus_____ to be miser_____', which was an entirely suit_____ subject for two happy people like us to discuss.

We thought it would be advis_____ to write a script first. We were both cap_____ debaters, but we thought it would be sens_____ to practise in case we made some terr_____ mistake. The trouble was, the more serious and respons_____ I tried to sound, the more imposs_____ I found it to stop giggling.

Jatty was not helping. She was in full debating mode. 'Presum_____ you think that if you are laughing uncontroll_____ the judges will be reason_____ likely to think you agree with the motion,' she intoned. 'This might be true, but it is poss_____ a good idea to make a few useful points in between giggles.'

'You are prob_____ right,' I spluttered, my shoulders vis_____ shaking.